Course description: A survey of Phoenician-Punic texts in their cultural context.

This course will include instruction on Phoenician alphabet, grammar, and epigraphy, as well as the detailed study of inscriptions from a broad range of periods and areas covering the Phoenician and Punic world (both the motherland and the Mediterranean colonies) during the first millennium BC.
Each week students will study one long inscription or a group of smaller inscriptions. Alongside the texts, we will discuss each week one main cultural topic regarding Phoenician and Punic civilization, such as institutions, religion, colonization, etc.

Requirements:

Students will be expected to prepare assigned inscriptions and secondary readings before class (required secondary readings will be limited to around 35 pages per week, since students will also be working on the reading of inscriptions; additional readings will be recommended).

Class attendance and participation are essential for this course. There will be a midterm and a final exam and a final paper (5-8 pages for undergraduates, 9-12 pages for graduate students) on a topic previously discussed with the instructor.
The exams will focus on: a) the texts studied in class, including translations of passages, grammatical questions, and contextual questions (such as date, historical context, etc.); and b) more general culture-related questions from the readings and class discussions. There will be some special questions for graduate students. Graduate students will also be required to make at least one class presentation during the quarter.

Knowledge of Hebrew or another Semitic language (Arabic, Aramaic, Akkadian) is recommended, but the instructor might admit to the class students without this background upon request.
Main sources and aids:

(Additional bibliography might be provided for each text)

Required books:  (available at SBX)

Not required: (these sourcebooks will be on reserve so the students can use and copy the necessary materials from them)

Evaluation:
- Midterm Exam (multiple-essay format) 30%
- Final Exam (multiple-essay format) 30%
- Paper 20%
- Class preparation and participation (including class presentations for graduate students) 20%
