PHILOS 2465: DEATH AND THE MEANING OF LIFE

Course Description:
This course explores the question of whether there is a relation between mortality and a meaningful life. If we are all going to die, does that mean that our existence is ultimately meaningless, or is it possible to find meaning in life despite our mortality? Might the recognition that our days are numbered perhaps even make our lives more meaningful? These questions are among the most captivating and profound, albeit unsettling, philosophical questions one can ask, and they are central to our self-understanding as human beings. It is not surprising, then, that versions of these questions have been the subject of a large number of important works across many humanities disciplines, cultures, and historical periods. Students in this course will explore the relationship between death and the meaning of life by engaging with philosophical and literary texts from a broad range of traditions. They will also be encouraged to contribute to the age-old conversation about the relation between mortality and meaning by sharing their own reflections on a student-designed website.

Required texts and course materials:
- Albert Camus, The Myth of Sisyphus and Other Essays [required; available in campus bookstores]
- Simone de Beauvoir, All Men are Mortal [required; available in campus bookstores]
- All other readings and course materials will be made available on Carmen and on OSU’s Secured Media Library

Assignments and Grading:
- Five short answer/multiple choice pop quizzes 20% of final grade
- Group project: website design 20% of final grade
- Two 1-page writing assignments (prompts TBA) 20% of final grade
- One 5-page paper (topics TBA) 40% of final grade

1 Groups of 3-5 students will design portions of a joint website intended to share resources and reflections on the course topic with the campus community and the general public. The website will contain a mix of personal reflections, arguments, book or movie reviews, and possibly even creative writing and videos, to name just a few possibilities.
Weekly Topical Outline:

Week 1  Introduction, Course Goals, and Objectives
Watch the Woody Allen movie Hannah and Her Sisters
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 5.1 (Tolstoy, A Confession)

Week 2  Untangling the Question
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 1.2 (Thomson, “Untangling the Question”)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 1.4 (Nozick, “Philosophy and the Meaning of Life”)

Week 3  Is Immortality Desirable?
Read Simone de Beauvoir, All Men are Mortal
Read Emily Dickinson, selected poems [on Carmen]
Optional: watch the movie version of All Men are Mortal

Week 4  Is Immortality Desirable? (Cont’d)
Read Jorge Luis Borges, “The Immortal”
Read Bernard Williams, “The Makropulos Case”

Week 5  Is Immortality Desirable? (Cont’d)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 5.3 (Fischer, “Why Immortality Is Not So Bad”)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 5.4 (Metz, “The Immortality Requirement for Life’s Meaning”)

Week 6  Life as Absurd
Read Camus, The Myth of Sisyphus [selections]
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 3.3 (Nagel, “The Absurd”)

Week 7  Life as Absurd (Cont’d)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 3.1 (Schopenhauer, On the Vanity of Existence)
Watch the movie adaptation of Beckett, Waiting for Godot

Week 8  Life as Absurd (Cont’d)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 2.4 (Craig, “The Absurdity of Life without God”)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 2.2 (Lewis, “On Living in an Atomic Age”)

Week 9  Meaning without God and without Immortality
Read Aristotle, The Nicomachean Ethics [selections, on Carmen]
Read Epicurus, selections from letters and other writings [on Carmen]

Week 10  Meaning without God and without Immortality (Cont’d)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 4.3 (Wolf, “The Meanings of Lives”)

Week 11  Meaning without God and without Immortality (Cont’d)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 4.4 (Audi, “Intrinsic Value and Meaningful Life”)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 4.5 (Wielenberg, “God and the Meaning of Life”)

2
Week 12  Human Extinction and the Meaning of Life
Read Scheffler, Death and the Afterlife [selections]
Optional: watch the movie The Children of Men

Week 13  Human Extinction and the Meaning of Life (Cont’d)
Read Exploring the Meaning of Life ch. 5.5 (Trisel, “Human Extinction and the Value of Our Efforts”)

Week 14  Reflections and Review

GE Category: Literature
Goals: Students evaluate significant texts in order to develop capacities for aesthetic and historical response and judgment; interpretation and evaluation; and critical listening, reading, seeing, thinking, and writing.

Expected Learning Outcomes:
1. Students analyze, interpret, and critique significant literary (and philosophical) works.
2. Through reading, discussing, and writing about literature, students appraise and evaluate the personal and social values of their own and other cultures.

Philos 2465 aims to achieve the first these learning outcomes by teaching students strategies for analyzing, interpreting, and critiquing literary as well as philosophical texts, as well as giving them multiple opportunities (in class discussion as well as in writing assignments) to practice these analytic skills. The course aims to achieve the second learning outcome by encouraging students to reflect about the ways in which the social and personal values of the authors we are encountering might shape their views about the meaning of life. Further, the lectures will contain the instructor’s reflections about the connection between cultural and personal values on the one hand, and attitudes towards death and toward the meaning of life on the other hand.

Policy about Academic Misconduct:
It is the responsibility of the Committee on Academic Misconduct to investigate or establish procedures for the investigation of all reported cases of student academic misconduct. The term “academic misconduct” includes all forms of student academic misconduct wherever committed; illustrated by, but not limited to, cases of plagiarism and dishonest practices in connection with examinations. Instructors shall report all instances of alleged academic misconduct to the committee (Faculty Rule 3335-5-487). For additional information, see the Code of Student Conduct http://studentlife.osu.edu/csc/.
Disability Services:
Students with disabilities that have been certified by the Office for Disability Services will be appropriately accommodated and should inform the instructor as soon as possible of their needs. The Office for Disability Services is located in 150 Pomerene Hall, 1760 Neil Avenue; telephone 292-3307, TDD 292-0901; http://www.ods.ohio-state.edu/.
1 GE RATIONALE

1.1 How do the course objectives address the GE category expected learning outcomes?

The primary objectives of the course are to provide students with basic analytic tools and to help them employ these tools in exploring complex philosophical questions concerning death and the meaning of life. These basic tools are systematic thinking, critical reading, and analytical writing, that is, they coincide with the first GE expected learning outcome in the Literature category. This means that the course places emphasis on close readings of difficult literary and philosophical texts, the identification of arguments and implicit assumptions in a text, as well as careful textual analysis and interpretation. The second GE expected learning outcome for Literature is similarly central to the course objectives: through class discussion, the assigned readings, and the writing assignments, students are expected to understand and assess a number of very different perspectives on the meaning of life and its relation to mortality. Since attitudes toward death and life have a deeply personal as well as a social aspect, the course objectives align perfectly with the second expected learning outcome.

1.2 How do the readings assigned address the GE category expected learning outcomes?

Students in the course are expected to explore the course topic by reading, analyzing, and critiquing a wide variety of different texts, some literary, others straightforwardly philosophical, and yet others a combination of the two. For instance, the sample syllabus assigns poems by Emily Dickinson about death and immortality, a novel by Simone de Beauvoir, letters written by the ancient philosopher Epicurus, as well as literary essays, short stories, and scholarly articles. Encountering such a wide range of texts written in such a wide range of styles about the course topic will enable students not only to develop or hone skills in textual analysis, interpretation, and criticism, but also to acquire a much more nuanced understanding of the course topic. Moreover, the assigned readings invite reflections about personal and social attitudes toward the meaning of life across different cultures since the readings portray a great variety of such attitudes. In these ways, the course readings address both GE expected learning outcomes.

1.3 How do the topics address the GE category expected learning outcomes?

The course topics reflect the range of positions that people in different cultures and historical periods have taken on the questions whether life has a meaning and whether this meaning is in conflict with mortality. In one section of the course, for instance, we will read absurdist texts—both literary and philosophical—which argue for, or illustrate, the view that the search for meaning is futile. In another section, we will encounter the view, endorsed by some prominent ancient philosophers, that happiness or pleasure is the purpose of human existence. Yet another section of the course examines the possibility that personal immortality might make our lives meaningful, while still another section looks at arguments that the survival of our species and culture might be sufficient for giving meaning to our existence and to our pursuits. These different approaches to the course topic reflect a variety of theories of value: they provide completely different answers to the question what can render a life valuable, or what the value of human existence might be. Here again, there is a close connection to the second GE expected learning outcome. Likewise, because these topics are quite complex and require students to grapple with very profound philosophical questions, exploring these topics involves a high level of critical thinking, careful reading, and clear writing.

1.4 How do the written assignments address the GE category expected learning outcomes?

Through the writing assignments and the website project, students add their own perspectives and reflections to the conversation about the meaning of life and actively engage with the readings and course topics in an additional way. The feedback they receive on these assignments—from the instructor, the graders, and peers—will enable them to refine their analytic writing skills. Producing good philosophical prose requires writers to choose their words extremely carefully, weigh the strength of their arguments judiciously, and structure their presentation meticulously. It also requires a nuanced grasp of the subject matter. The writing assignments are designed to build these skills, in accordance with the first GE expected learning outcome. Insofar as these assignments also require careful reflection about the meaning or value of life, they also help foster the second expected learning outcome.

1.5 How does the course aim to sharpen students’ response, judgment, and evaluation skills?

The course will teach students some basic techniques from informal logic, such as identifying valid and fallacious argument forms, reconstructing the argument contained in a philosophical text, and supplying implicit premises. These techniques will improve students’ ability to respond to and evaluate philosophical texts, as well as to refine and express their own views. On the literary side, these techniques can also help defend a particular interpretation of a text. Furthermore, the course aims to teach students how to engage in close readings of important passages, which is a crucial skill for studying and evaluating texts of any genre.

2 GE ASSESSMENT PLAN

The success of Philosophy 2465 in achieving the two expected learning outcomes of the Literature GE area will be assessed in three interrelated ways: direct assessment through qualitative evaluation of student writing, indirect assessment through student questionnaires, and comparative assessment of student achievement across different years.

a) Expected Level of Student Achievement

The expected level of student achievement with respect to the first GE expected learning outcome for Literature is the following: if the course is successful, a large percentage of the students should show significant improvement in their analytic writing skills (that is, in their abilities to analyze, interpret, and critique literary texts), measured in the ways described below.

The expected level of student achievement with respect to the second GE expected learning outcome for Literature is for every student to engage in at least some reflection about the connection between cultural and personal values and different views on death and the meaning of life. This will be measured in the ways described below, as well as through class participation.

If the course succeeds in its objectives, at least 80% of the students should receive at least a B on their final papers, which requires that they are able to interpret and evaluate a difficult literary text critically and express their analysis of the text clearly. It also requires that they show evidence of having thought about the ways in which different personal and cultural values may have shaped the assigned texts.

b) Direct Measures of Student Success
The two short writing assignments and will serve as direct measures of student success with respect to the first expected learning outcome since it is their purpose to test the students’ critical reading, thinking, and writing skills. Because one of the writing assignments will be due early in the semester, and the second one closer to the end, these assignments will also reveal whether there has been improvement. The two writing assignments are moreover designed to prepare students for the final paper, which in turn will serve as additional evidence of student success in achieving this expected learning outcomes. More specifically, the instructor and graders will pay particular attention to whether individual students have become (a) more careful readers of the assigned texts, as evidenced by the way they engage with these texts in the writing assignments, (b) more systematic and critical thinkers, based on the arguments they present in the assignments, and (c) clearer and more careful writers. The pop quizzes will also serve as indirect measures of student success with respect to the first expected learning outcome because they are meant to test how carefully the students have read the assigned texts and how well they are able to identify the most crucial features of these texts.

Similarly, the writing assignments will serve as direct assessment of the extent to which the second expected learning outcome was achieved: in the assignments, students will be asked to reflect on the ways in which the cultural and personal backgrounds of the authors they have read might be reflected in these authors’ views on death and the meaning of life. Students will also be asked to think about the way their personal and cultural background might be shaping their attitudes toward the course topic. In order to receive at least a B on these assignments, students must engage in this kind of reflection; therefore, success on the assignments is direct evidence that the student has achieved the second expected learning outcome.

c) Indirect Measures of Student Success
In addition to these direct measures, the instructor will also employ indirect measures. As well as asking students to comment on their learning process with respect to both GE expected learning outcomes in the official SEIs, the instructor will conduct an anonymous in-class survey. The survey will contain questions specifically about the two GE expected learning outcomes, asking students to assess their progress toward these goals.
d) Follow-Up/Feedback Process
Finally, each time the course is offered, the instructor will compose and submit to the Department’s Teaching Evaluation and Assessment Committee a short report summarizing overall student performance on quizzes, class projects, and writing assignments. The report will also integrate student feedback from the survey described above. These reports will be grouped by term and saved on the shared departmental drive, so that teaching effectiveness in a particular semester can be evaluated by comparison to previous years. On the basis of these comparisons, the relative emphases of different elements of the course can be adjusted in order to help more students achieve the expected learning outcomes.

3  CURRICULUM MAP

PHIL 2465 will not be required for the major, but it can be taken as an elective course as illustrated by the following curriculum map:

Each Major must include:

1.  PHIL 3000: Gateway Seminar (3 credits)

2.  History of Philosophy: Any Three of the following (9 credits)
   - PHIL 3210: History of Ancient Philosophy
   - PHIL 3220: History of Medieval Philosophy
   - PHIL 3230: History of 17th Century Philosophy
   - PHIL 3240: History of 18th Century Philosophy
   - PHIL 3250: History of 19th Century Philosophy
   - PHIL 3261: Fundamental Concepts of Existentialism

3.  Philosophical Topics  (9 credits)
   Required of all majors: PHIL 3300: Moral Philosophy (3 credits)
   And two of the following (6 credits):
   - PHIL 3530: Philosophy of Logic
   - PHIL 3600: Introduction to Philosophy of Language
   - PHIL 3650: Philosophy of Science
   - PHIL 3680: Sex and Death: Introduction to the Philosophy of Biology
   - PHIL 3700: Introduction to Metaphysics
   - PHIL 3750: Introduction to Theory of Knowledge
   - PHIL 3800: Introduction to Philosophy of Mind
   - PHIL 3810: Philosophy of Action
   - PHIL 3820: Philosophy of Perception

4.  Upper Level Coursework: Any Two PHIL 5xxx courses (6 credits)
5. Elective: Any one further Philosophy course at the 2xxx [such as PHIL 2465: Death and the Meaning of Life], 3xxx, 4xxx, or 5xxx level (3 credits)
